

Listen to what your child says, not how they say it

- Say the words in a grown up way, like he would if he could
- He will then feel you are listening to what he says rather than how he says it.
- He will hear how to say it right.

Try not to correct your child

- This can make your child feel you are not very interested in what he says but only how he says it.
- If this happens too many times he may give up trying to tell you.
- He might also think he has used the wrong word.
